Jurassic World interesting facts

* This is the first film in the series, which were not recording at Universal Studios in Los Angeles. Instead, Louisiana was chosen because of the large tax breaks offered there.

* Much of the film was filmed in 35mm format. However, filming on location in Hawaii, used the camera to record in 65mm format. And one of the 65mm cameras used in this film, was previously involved in the film "2001: A Space Odyssey" (1968) by Stanley Kubrick.

* During the filming, in order to avoid leakage of information, the project was called "Ebb» («Ebb Tide»). This name was chosen by Steven Spielberg, long before it joined the project Colin Trevorrow.

* The scenario was written in three weeks, and the studio insisted that the production started in June 2013. However, Steven Spielberg has decided that it will take more time to make a really good movie, and suspended the premature start of production. The script has been approved by Spielberg in September of 2013.
